To-day

Spirited playing marked the doubles ment of the Harlem Tennis Club on the clay courts at 135th Street and Eighth Avenue yesterday afternoon. Vincent Richards, national boy champion, and William M. Fischer defeated Ingo Hartmann and Elliott H. Binzen semi-final round. In the other semi-final bracket Henry H. Bassford, of the Mount Pleasant Tennis Club, and which he answered the call for help,

In the second round there was a keenly fought struggle between Richards and Wischer, and Paul Martin and Jones W. Mersereau, the sets going to 6—8, 6—3, 6—2 before Richards and his partner came through. Bassford and Steinkampf won by default in the same round over E. J. Clapp and Embree Henderson.

The final round of th singles, between Bassford and Tilden, will be played this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, with Tilden generally regarded as the probable winner. It is figured that his great speed at court covering, his really meteoric service and his brilliancy overhead will be factors which Bassford, essentially a back-court player, will be unable to offset. While Tilden is prone to wildness, as are all players of his rushing, headlong style of play, he has enough winning shots at his command, unless he is particularly erratic, to take the measure of the average player.

Bassford May Surprise

Bassford is machine-like in the recadiness with which he can rake an opponent's court with deep, well placed drives off his forehand, and he can play from the net position, too, when him has paved the way for the openings. If Tilden is not in control of his lightning shots this afternoon, Bassford may spring one of the surprises of the early outdoor season.

The veteran Fischer's court craft, blended with the youthful Richards's speed and brilliance of stroke, proved a strong combination, and although Beinzen and Hartmann put up a stirring battle in the first part of the match they were not equal to the task of checking Richards and his partner once the latter pair got going at full speed.

The defeat of Tilden and young Donaldson came in the nature of a surprise to the gallery, but Bassford and Steinkampf had the advantage of smoother team work, the fearmer guarding the back of the court very effectively, while Steinkampf was always a power at the net position. Against this style of play the brilliance of Tilden and Donaldson could not prevail, although the struggle for the mastery was a close one. Tilden, in his anxiety to cover up the openings, tried to cover up the openings and pand whith a safe blow to centre, which was to short for run making, but sufficed to the making the back of the call the defended with a bingle to left and Lee Magee continued the cannonading with a safe blow to centre, which was to short for run making, but sufficed to the making the back of the court with a safe blow to centre, which was to short for run making, but sufficed to the fining for the filed and the hases were filed. O'Mara Bombards Score Board and Takes Long Slide Across Plate

PITTSBURGH, May 17.—Both the Pittsburgh and the Brooklyn teams gave a poor exhibition of major league baseball to-day in a game which the latter club won, 7 to 4.

Cheney was effective until the last inning, when Pittsburgh obtained half of the team's six hits, but the side was retired with the bases filled. Cheney gave the home team two runs in the fourth inning by making a wild throw to the plate.

Harmon was hit hard from the start, and, after giving nine hits in five innings, gave way to Steele, who had little better success in stopping the visitors. O'Mara knocked a long drive to the score board and tallied by fast base running and a long slide to the Plate.

by the Browns.

At first it didn't look as though the Browns were going to do any twoing, a Allan Russell pitched the ball rich down their throats for a period of fire and two-third innings. Then some bird pulled the ancient wheeze about the prospects being fine for a no-hit game, and so, of course, George the Sieler hit a sharp and undisputed single into right field.

It was one of the most undisputed of undisputed singles we ever have seen, and thus Allan Russell was deprived of his chance for a no-hit game. Not that a no-hit game means anything, but it sounds officious and important, in that respect being somewhat like a United States Senator.

Baseball, after all, is a simple process or formula in physics. The important thing is to score more runs than the other fellow, and that is precisely what the 1919 Browns, meaning the 1918 Yankees, did against the 1917 Yankees, meaning the 1918 Browns, yesterday. Of course, there may not be a mid-winter deal between the Browns and the Yankees next season—it may only be just a common winter deal—and, if not, we are in error in calling the 1918 Yankees the 1919 Browns. Still, habit is a hard thing to overcome. Look at Nat Goodwin.

Jones Uses Three Pitchers

Jones Uses Three Pitchers

The outstanding feature of yesterday's game was that the Yankees much more runs than the Browns, and so to as we could see, that was all there was to it. There were, of course, subor dinated points of interest. Fields Jones managed to change pitchers three times, which gave him his customar perfect average, and Murderers' Rodid all the murdering that was necessary, Franklin Baker, Mr. Peck an Paw and Wally Pipp knocking the bahere and there with spirit and the was known precision.

Promising Rally Nipped.

In the sixth, with two down, Austin bunted and was safe on Hannah's low throw to Pipp. Sisler hit a larruping single to right, sending Austin to third. Gedeon singled to left, scoring Austin and driving Sisler to third. Smith fouled to Hannah, nipping a promising rally.

fouled to Hannah, nipping a promising rally.

In the seventh the Browns scored again. Nunamaker hit a slow roller to Peck and continued to second when Peck threw the ball to the right field stands. Gerber singled, sending Nuny to third, and Hendryx, swinging for Rogers—who was then pitching for himself, Fielder Jones and Al Sothoron,—hit a sacrifice fly to Marsans that scored Nanamaker with the Browns last run.
